EDITOR'S NOTEStepping Back in Time!

History books take us back through time to events and places where these events occurred. This month, I guess you could call us history buffs! Looking back at the previous issues, we covered Dragon Ball Z history via a timeline. But, we all know that Dragon Ball Z is not the true beginning of Dragon Ball. The Origin of Dragon Ball tells a story that dates back to the ancient times when elders spoke of an exceptionally long journey and a traveler with a purpose. Find out who and where it all began on page 62. History books also tell us about popular people. Who is the most popular Dragon Ball Z character? The answer is... On page 26, we look at the different reasons why one particular character is more popular than all the others. If we could go back in time, and know what we know now, most DBZ fans would scoop up all their favorite action figures and toys that are not made anymore. Today, everyone wants to know where to get older DBZ items and what characters have been made. Well, for those of you who have all the rare pieces and are waiting for new characters to be made, why wait. Make history with your Dragon Ball Z collection. This month's Fantastic Plastic, article on page 10, has some great ideas on how to make custom Dragon Ball Z figures. Who knows you could be the only person in history with a SS5 Goku!!! Who knew that history could be so much fun! So DBZ fans, get out there and make history with all your ideas!

And, for the first time (in history), on page 67 you'll find a catalog where you can purchase many different Dragon Ball Z items available through Beckett. So if there is something you need for your collection, let us know!

Don't forget to fill out our survey on page 61 for a chance to win an Artbox/Beckett promo card.

Correction: In last month's issue the Fantastic Plastic article was not written by Brian Hyman but by "Dragon Ball Z Action Figure Expert" Dan Hancock.

Best Wishes,

Master Roshi's TRIVIA

By Greg Werner

How well do you know the creator of Dragon Ball Z?
Test yourself on these questions about Akira
Toriyama and find out.

1. If Akira Toriyama continued the Dragon Ball story-line, who did he say he would make the main character?
2. Who named the move Kamehameha?
3. Before he drew comics, what did Toriyama do for a living?
4. Name one of the short comic series Akira Toriyama has done since Dragon Ball ended.
5. Recently Toriyama made a joke comic from the Neko Majin series called Neko Majin Z. In the comic, Neko Majin faces off against an over-confident husband and wife. What race are they?
6. What DBZ character does
- Toriyama think would die earliest of natural causes, and why?
7. Who is Akira Toriyama's favorite character?
8. Which famous Asian action superstar inspired some of Toriyama's work in Dragon Ball?
9. Akira Toriyama named one of King Kai's pets that didn't appear in the manga. What did he call it?
10. What was the name of Akira Toriyama's first manga?

FIND THE MAGIC IN YOU

The Dragon's Lair

Shenron-

Sometime between 461-650 A.D., Kami created the Dragon Balls. The technique he used to create these magical spheres is unknown, but it's something only certain special Namekians can do. He modeled the form of the spirit, that would appear when the 7 Dragon Balls are gathered and the password uttered, after that of a dragon; a mythical beast with a reptilian body and the horns of a deer. He named his dragon the Dragon God or Shenron. Kami stated later that by forming the Dragon Balls he was fulfilling a yearning inside of him that he could not explain. This yearning was later revealed as shrouded memories of his Namekian past, but little did he know what trouble this would cause further down the line.

Shenron is a Dragon that exists not as a part of this world, an ethereal beast. His essence is contained within a statue that exists within Kami's shrine. Similarly, the Dragon Balls' essence lies within Shenron. Should the statue be broken, or Shenron killed, the Dragon Balls will turn to stone and become useless. This happens on one occasion when Piccolo Daimaou blows up Shenron after he grants a wish. But Mr. Popo fixes statue and Shenron is restored. Going even further up the hierarchy, the Dragon, statue and the Dragon Balls are all related to the creator of the Dragon Balls. Should the creator die, the Dragon Balls will become stone and Shenron will perish, however, the statue will remain intact, waiting for a new owner to restore its power.

For most of the series, Shenron appears when summoned, says his usual diatribe, sometimes refusing a wish since it lies outside his power, and then says "Farewell", and splits. But, he gains a little bit of a personality in the DBZ movies and in Dragon Ball GT. For example in Movie Number 12, Shenron becomes a comedic character when he's left waiting for someone, anyone to make a wish for the better part of the movie, "Uh....doesn't anyone have a wish yet?". In the final episode of Dragon Ball GT, he speaks at great length with the characters and even sympathizes with Son Goku's cause. In the end of the series, Shenron returns from whence he came with Goku, their fate is a complete mystery and is entirely up to the viewer's interpretation. But Son Goku's Japanese voice actor, Masako Nozawa, had this to offer, "...he [Goku] left the mortal world and went to the God's world. The writers never said that he died. I believe he went there and continued to train." Here's hoping many of you have a similar positive view of the finale when you finally see it.

UNEARTHING THE DATA OF DRAGON BALL Z CHARACTERS

Porunga-

This enormous dragon god is the Namekian vision of a dragon, obviously very different from earth's conception in it's highly human-like form, (well at least more-so than Shenron). Porunga is the creation of the Highest Elder of the Namekians known as Guru or Saichourou. Its form was modeled after a vision Saichourou saw in a dream. Porunga speaks Namekian and can only be summoned using the Namekian language, but he displays the ability to speak the language used by the earth's inhabitants, including, "OK!"

Porunga is fortunate enough to not be as sought after and harassed as Shenron was. Porunga has a rough time during the Frieza saga when his creator dies twice, but is later restored to life and powered up by Muuri. Porunga is five times the size of Shenron and by the end of the series he's a much better deal for your dollar, or rather, Dragon Ball. At that time he can bring multiple people back to life (more than one time), grant three wishes and his recharging period is much less than one year.

Mad Science: Creating Custom DBZ Figures!

For many collectors, just buying toys isn't enough. Some want certain characters that aren't being made; some want to see other versions of characters; some are just downright creative and constructive (or destructive!); but it seems that one of the most popular ways to take collecting to the next level is to start customizing figures.

What do I mean by customizing? A whole gamut of things, amigos. There are degrees of customization. For one person, simply retouching a figure's paint job (to take them from Saiyan to Super Saiyan, for example) might be enough. Some want to add armor or body parts, and others might want to cobble together a completely new figure! In customizing, your final product is only limited by your creativity and how much time you're willing to devote to it.

Here are some tools to get you started:

Polymer Clays & Sculpting Tools

Other than raw figures used for parts, Sculpey and similar polymer clays are the most important building block of the custom figure. You can use polymer clay to add armor, clothes, or body parts to an existing figure, or you can sculpt completely new figures or parts of figures out of it! Simply, mold, bake, and glue the new parts to your figure!

Also, polymer clay can be used for making molds of figures, if you're wanting to go that route. First, make sure the object you want to make a mold from doesn't have any deep overhangs that would trap the clay (if it does, you'll have to break it down into smaller pieces and assemble them later). Then, simply dust the object you want to mold with a little talcum powder, press it into a bed of polymer clay, put it in the refrigerator for a few hours, remove the original, and bake. Once your mold is hardened, you're ready to go!

For technical instructions on baking, and other useful modeling techniques, check out the Sculpey website at <http://www.sculpey.com>.

If you're looking for a professional look to your new sculpted parts, I also suggest going to a hobby store and picking up the deluxe kit of X-Acto knives. The deluxe kits contain straight blades, curved blades, and all sorts of tools you can use to get the most professional look possible.

Paint & Brushes

Choosing the right paint and brushes are the most important decisions you can make for your custom figures. Despite how amazing your new sculpt/creation might be, it's going to look horrible without a decent paint job.

First, anything you do will need an undercoat. A white primer is the easiest to work with, as the white is covered easily. Darker undercoats will give your final figure a more aged, darker look; however, it is much harder to paint a light color over a dark undercoat than vice versa.

Your local hobby store will have a great selection of model paints, and you want to choose colors that are right for your figure. For example, you'll probably want to stick to flat or low-gloss paints (human characters generally don't have shiny skin or clothes, but aliens often do!) I recommend Games Workshop's Citadel Color Paints, which are created specifically to paint gaming miniatures, and work really well for customizing action figures.

Finally, you'll need some high-quality brushes—don't buy good paint and cheap brushes, or you'll end up with less-than-desirable results. Stay away from completely artificial-hair brushes and go for a natural/artificial mix or a completely natural-hair brush (of course, they get more expensive as you go). At the least, you'll need a fine detail brush and a standard brush—the more brushes you buy, the easier your life will be.

For more details on paint and brush selection, as well as some useful buying and technique guides, head to the Games Workshop website at <http://www.games-workshop.com/hobby/beginners/home.htm>.

That's enough to get you started, so get out there and get to work! Be creative—don't think you have to stick to any kind of rules or regulations—anything you create is fair game, as long as you're happy with it! Once you've completed your creation, send me a picture (high resolution images only, please) to despores@dragonballtoys.com, and I'll highlight the most interesting customs in a future column.

Also, if you'd like to see the work of other customizers, go to <http://forums.dragonballtoys.com/customers/> and check out the variety of custom figures there!

The screenshot shows a step-by-step guide titled "How to Custom". It includes a main image of a custom figure and several smaller images illustrating specific steps or tools used in the process.

There's Something About Gohan

Why do DBZ fans like him so much?

Gohan's popularity is on the rise. It's been rising since the last Super Saiyan 2. And with the next to last season being shown (the final season will air sometime next year), more and more people are beginning to like Gohan. Fans of Gohan especially enjoy watching him as the Great Saiyaman. This article was put together to give all fans a better understanding of this truly likeable character. So sit back, and relax. But, please don't tell Vegeta about this article. He's still sore about not being more powerful than Kakarot. Plus, he'd be even more upset if he found out that Kakarot's son was getting his own article.

So just enjoy it, and let's keep this a secret from him. Shall we? wink

THE KNOWN FACTS ABOUT GOHAN

Gohan is the son of Goku and Chi-Chi. Gohan wanted to be a scholar, and made him study for long hours. This youngling constantly made her worry about if he would day dream, want to fight a major villain, or just get into trouble. Goku, on the other hand, did not care because he only wanted Gohan to live a happy and healthy life. Down the road, Gohan experiences things that could only be compared, in a way, to Goku's life. He makes many new friends, and yes, he even made Piccolo care about him as well as become his friend. And those who know Piccolo will tell you that he is the evil part of Kami, and would not show such emotions. Down the road, past the Frieza Era, Gohan became the third Saiyan (fourth, if you count Trunks) to become a Super Saiyan. He had the Saiyan Rage inside of him because he was never able to help the other heroes when the time came. This eventually caused him to achieve the Super Saiyan form. At the end of the Dragon Ball Z series, he marries Videl and then had a daughter named Pan.

THE UNKNOWN FACTS ABOUT GOHAN

There are many things not known, or even speculated about Gohan. Did you know that his hidden power is connected to his mother? It's true. Ox King is a Dragon Ball version of a god. During the creation of DB, Toriyama never created the Saiyans, Namekis, or even Kaioshins. He did create the Ox King, he mentioned that the Ox King

The description was not entirely true, but could be considered true. When Gohan was born, he developed more of Chi-Chi's attitude than Goku's. Gohan, if you are wondering, ended up having Goku's attitude. Since Gohan had developed Chi-Chi's attitude (mainly her temper), he ended up developing a power that is, or similar to, the Saiyan power. This fact also popped up during the Cell Games Saga when Gohan almost achieved Super Saiyan Level 2. It was not his Power Level that almost made him achieve the form, but his hidden power. And, it was his hidden power that also helped him defeat Cell.

WHAT THE FANS SAY

"There are several versions of Gohan but which ones do the fans like best? Here's what some fans had to say about their favorite character."

"I have to say that my favorite version of Gohan is "TV Gohan", because not only is he an adorable little kid, he reminds me of the inner child that is in all of us. Part of us may feel overwhelmed and scared by the trials life sets before us. We must overcome these things and need to realize the strengths that we have and how to use them. Piccolo has shown Gohan what it really means to be tough and stand your ground. Some of us are fortunate enough to have someone like that in our lives, and to have friends and family to watch out for us. He didn't take these things for granted and had gone from being a scared little kid to the most powerful person on Earth, and its awesom."

-Luzani Palermo, via Internet

"I liked Gohan when he fought Cell and when he was the Great Saiyeman"

-TrunksRocks273, via Internet

"Overall, I like the TV series Gohan the best, mostly from the Frieza Saga and the Buu Saga. Gohan's mindless rages proved how dangerous he could be and I just thought that was awesome. Gohan's rages boosted his fighting power to the extreme. I also like him because he's cool and he's not afraid to fight. I like him in the Buu Saga, or the start at least, but he's still cool!"

-Gakumon, via Internet

"I like Gohan when he's either a kid or a teen, in the movies and in some episodes. In some of the episodes, he can be annoying and stuff but that's just because he's a kid. I also like him because he fights well and goes Super Saiyan. His attitude is a good one yet not too good."

-Sally Kocher, via Internet

Overall, Gohan has many, many fans. Some like him in the mangas, some on TV, and others in the movies. But no matter what he looks like, his fans are there for him. Now you can let Vegeta in. And if he wonders what you have been doing, just tell him that you were trying to figure out why he claims that Kakarot is better than him. Anything else would make him suspicious. *

The Search for a perfect page

After a hard day of filming at the animation studio, Gohan decided to visit his folks. He saw Chi-Chi standing in her front yard waving to a blu far off in the sky.

"Hello son," Chi-Chi said to him. "I was just seeing off your father. He's going on a quest to find the perfect Dragon Ball web page!"

"What's a web page?" Gohan asked, scratching his head.

Chi-Chi explained with a smile on her face. "The World Wide Web is an alternate universe that exists on millions of computers. Fans of the Dragon Ball comics, games, cartoon shows and movies have been creating pages for this universe and sharing them with each other."

Master Roshi sauntered over, and winking at Chi-Chi, told Gohan how the web works.

"Time and space are very different in the web universe! People who live much too far from each other to casually visit or telephone can post messages, stories, pictures and even their own cartoons on the web, and instantly make them available to millions of people!"

"That's remarkable!" Gohan exclaimed. "So I don't even have to show up at the studio and some of these web people are making up cartoons on their own!"

Cartoons, stories, pictures, even quizzes!

Chi-Chi answered, knowledgably. "These fans really know your cartoons well, and try to challenge each other all the time! There's an ongoing quiz at <http://http://www.dbzonline100.com/question.htm> that tests fans' knowledge."

Just then Trunks dropped in and joined the discussion.

"Did I hear somebody say 'challenge'? Gohan, where the heck have you been? Everyone surfs the web, dude! You should see the stuff people are doing about me!"

The DB/Z/GT Quiz

Chi-Chi had just enough time to type in her answer to the first question, just for a start!

Chi-Chi smiled and ignored Trunks. "You know, Gohan, there's a lot of merchandise based on the cartoons as well, and there's a wonderful site on the web with pictures of each of it that can't be found elsewhere."

It's the JASPER pages at <http://www.dbz/Disney.html>!"

"Why is it called 'JASPER'?" Gohan asked. "That stands for 'The Japanese

Animation Super
Premier
Entertainment Review, of course!"

Master Roshi piped in: "But for the latest information, you may want to visit <http://www.dragonballz.com>. The wise warrior always has up-to-date facts on hand!"

Gohan was about to tell Master Roshi that he didn't need to be a warrior to seek out knowledge, when his brother Goten came along.

"There you are Gohan! Hi Trunks! What's up?"

"Your father went off looking for the perfect Dragon Ball web page," Chi-Chi answered.

"Well, this beat page page will do just fine." (<http://www.jackback.com/comics/gotencard/>)

"Goshukun," Goten stated.

"You would say that," said Trunks. "It's a Goten Shrine Page."

Chi-Chi shook her head and walked away.

Gohan

"You know, you would probably love the Videl Shrine Page at <http://www.geocities.com/videlwebpage/>. It's loaded with pictures and background on your wife."

Gohan nodded in agreement. "Sounds great!" he thought.

Master Roshi apparently read Gohan's thoughts. He said, "Yes it does sound great, but there are无数的 shrine to Dragon Ball characters all over the web."

You can find lots of the characters at <http://www.dragonballz.com/directory/shrine.html>. Just remember that there is no time or space on the web. You and everyone you know could be young or old, dead or alive, and exist in multiple universes all over the Internet."

Just then Goku whooshed down from the sky and greeted the group.

"Why are you back so soon?" Chi-Chi asked.

Goku shrugged his shoulders and answered, "I was hungry, and I forgot to bring money to buy food!"

Chi-Chi smiled and told Goku to visit <http://www.pinkcandy.net/chi/credit.php> and grab himself a Gohan Express Card.

"Yeah Pop!" Gohan said. Don't browse the web without it!"

Of course the perfect Dragon Ball web page may never be found no matter who does the looking. Still, the search is what makes it so much fun. I'm always discovering new and different sites with unexpected features. Hundreds of readers have been sending email to me with their favorite sites, and I read each and every one, even though I often can't find the time to answer them all or to put them all in the magazine. If you have a site for me to look at, send the address to mviray@openm.com and don't forget to put "DBZ Readers' Picks" in the subject line. I am especially interested in seeing original artwork and amateur-made hydrades.

The problem that has happened to a few visitors to my web pages get written about here is that they wind up with too many people trying to get to their site. This can be a problem with some of the free hosting services which often put a limit on daily visitor traffic. In rare cases, pages with too many visitors actually get shut down entirely! If you can't get through to a web site you've read about here, wait a week or two and you'll probably have an easier time of it.

Strategy: Attack your opponent, and use Non-Combat Cards to do stronger attacks and block more.

deck tuner light in the dark

down into sections

Any Opponent

many, and the Denice Dragon Dais do a great job of fixing that. Some anti-anger and Vegeta's Quickness Drill are also included in your deck.

Combat Cards

While Deck 1 has a few cards that are unique like Trunks' Blocking Drill, the majority of the combat cards are from the chosen Double Saiyan deck. Personality is still maintained by including cards against a strong Player like Cell's Cell Bomb and Black Defensive Burst. Time Is A Warrior's Tool is now considered a must have card to prevent from attacking. Android 18's Stare Down is quite useful, however, it isn't the most useful known to me.

Physical Combat Cards

Many of the cards in this section either help to increase damage or decrease damage. Increasing this deck's damage against your opponent. These cards were added to the deck because they are useful cards. Stronger and weaker cards like Black Side Kick (which, by the way, is not just not for Boarding Drills) were removed. Black Overpowering Attack and Black Defensive Burst are two of my favorite Black deck cards. They attack your opponent with physical life cards, and the other cards prevent your opponent from attacking.

Energy Combat Cards

Again, many cards in this section are unique to this deck. Black and Yamcha's Skillful Defense are the best cards in this deck. Black Flying Kick and Black Front Kick are great blocking power cards. Black Energy Web and Black Energy Blast are great overwhelming attack cards. Life cards like Black Energy Web and Black Energy Blast were added for greater blocking power.

PRICE GUIDE & CHECKLIST

HOW TO USE

What the Columns Mean

The first column lists the item's retail selling price. The HI column is the highest price it represents for a card or set. The LO column in the left generally represents the lowest price one would expect to find with extensive shopping.

What the Arrows Mean

Up arrows denote prices that went up since the last issue. Down arrows denote prices that went down since the last issue. Arrows don't mean a card or set is "going up" or "going down".

Grading

All cards and toys in the Price Guide are based on Mint condition. Damaged cards are generally sold for 25 to 75 percent of Mint value. Toys that are loose (out of box) are generally sold for a price off the Mint value.

THE ORIGIN OF DRAGON BALL

By Greg Werner

THE LEGEND

Dragon Ball, Dragon Ball Z and Dragon Ball GT. These phenomena are relatively new to the United States; since when Dragon Ball's first 13 episodes were aired in syndication in 1995, Dragon Ball Z was already finishing up its anime in Japan. And even though Dragon Ball began in January 1984 in Japan, published in Shonen Jump, the roots of Dragon Ball go even further back than that....about 1400 years back. Behind every superhero there's a famous origin. This is the origin of Son Goku and Dragon Ball.

At around 600 AD, a Chinese monk named Hsuan-Tzang made a pilgrimage from his home in China, Chang'an, all the way to India. Hsuan's purpose of undertaking this great task was to collect Buddhist scrolls and return with them to China in order to spread the teachings. Upon returning to his town, he became famous. The emperor bestowed upon him the title Tripitaka. Tripitaka became sort of a hero, and as things like this usually do, people told stories about his journey. Over time these stories became exaggerated. It told of Tripitaka's encounters with monsters, demons and spirits. Eventually a monkey was added to the story. This monkey was Tripitaka's escort on his travels. Wu Cheng compiled these stories into a written record; it was named Hsi-Yu Chi (She Yu Jee) or quite simply, The Journey to the West.

In this record, there were several more escorts added to Tripitaka and the monkey's party. There was Chu-Pa Chieh, a spirit in the form of a pig, and Shi-Monk, a demon with a necklace of skulls. The monkey was named Sun Wukong. Since the Japanese written-language shares the original Chinese characters, but only with different pronunciations, in Japanese, Sun Wukong is spoken as Son Gokou.

THE STORY

Hsi Yu Chi can be appreciated on many levels. It is political, philosophical, funny, and of course a fun legend that can be enjoyed by anyone. The story begins with the birth of Sun Wukong from pure rock. Being born from stone, Wukong isn't any normal monkey. He is a bit crazy and impolite, but he can do much more than any other monkey; he can think like a human. He becomes the king of the monkeys and lives in the Mountain of Flowers and Fruit. But after living for several decades, Sun Wukong begins to fear death and desires immortality. In order to achieve his wish, he travels to a temple where he meets a high-priest. After much training Sun Wukong learns magic, how to fight and the secret of long life. With his training, he learned how to jump very far, ride on clouds, and to make fake copies of himself (all to be exact).

DRAGON BALL

Let's Search for Adventure and Magical, Mystical Treasures!

DRAGON BALL

Let's Search for Adventure and Magical, Mystical Treasures!

Needing a weapon to defend him, Sun Wukong travels to the home of the Dragon King in the sea. He steals a treasured weapon from the Dragon King, a rod that can extend to the heavens at his will. Having upset the Dragon King he is taken to Heaven so that the gods can keep their eye on him. But while there, Wukong steals sacred immortality peaches, which he becomes immortal. On his return to his Mountain of Flowers and Fruit and wages a war on Heaven. (He was pretty ticked off at them for keeping him there, just so he stayed out of trouble). His battle against Heaven was futile and after having survived hours against the likes of the Ox Demon King, he and his army were defeated by the power of the Gods. At the end of the battle, Sun Wukong was to be executed, but because he had consumed the peaches of immortality, he could not be killed. Tathagata, (which means "thus gone" signifying attained nirvana), who is Buddha, offered Sun Wukong a chance to go free if he could leap a great distance from him. Having learned the secret to jumping incredibly far, Sun Wukong jumps an incredible distance and lands near the base of a great mountain. To prove he was there, he marks his territory and jumps back to Buddha. As things turn out, Sun Wukong only jumped across Buddha's palm! And that mountain was one of his fingers!!!! Buddha decides Sun Wukong's punishment and seals him under the Five-Fingered Mountain. After several hundred years, he is released from the mountain and as payment for being released; he escorts the monk Tripitaka on his journey. And thus begins the journey West.

HSI YU CHI MEETS DB

So where do the relationships really begin? In the start of Dragon Ball, the story follows Hsi Yu Chi's character formula, but takes the story in a completely different direction. The character Son Gokou is obviously directly based on Sun Wukong. His monkey tail and extending Power Pole (Nyoi Bo) are staples of the Sun Wukong character. Bulma is based on Tripitaka. This may be a bit of a joke making a male priest into a sultry teenage girl.

Tripitaka himself, although male, is very feminine and naive at times because of his sheltered life. Oolong is certainly based Chu Pa Chich, the spirit who was transformed into pig form. Although not really clear, Yamcha is probably based on Sha Monk, the water demon; however, in sketches Toriyama made from the time of early Dragon Ball Z of characters dressed as Hsi Yu Chi characters, Piccolo is always Sha Monk. So what else does Dragon Ball borrow from The Journey to the West? The Dragon Ball and Dragon Ball Z anime contain many references, which thin out as the series progresses. And now for your reading pleasure, here are some of the best nods to Hsi Yu Chi in Dragon Ball. See if you can spot them or already know them!

- Goku can perform an attack that makes fake copies of him. Sun Wukong can make 72 copies of himself.
- Sun Wukong can fly in clouds. Goku can fly on the Nimbus (Kintoun) because he has a pure heart.
- In the second Dragon Ball movie, Goku battles Lucifer in a Five-Fingered mountain. This is the mountain Sun Wukong was trapped under for 500 years.
- Also in the second Dragon Ball movie, Goku fights the demon Ghastel, a red beast that floats on eerily lit orbs and fights with sharp ribbon. Although the characters have different names, Sun Wukong fights a villain just like this who floats on orbs and attacks with ribbon.
- In Dragon Ball, when Goku is training by running around the world, he meets a village terrorized by two villains, Ginkaku and Kinkaku. These exact same villains are in The Journey to the West. They can trap you in a gourd that will turn your body into silk (Japanese rice wine).
- During Dragon Ball Z, while in Hell, Goku eats King Yenma's fruit. Although the peach he consumes does not make him immortal, it fills his stomach up so that he is energized for a long period. This is like when Sun Wukong ate the peaches of immortality in the heavens.
- Another nod to the gods' fruit appears in Dragon Ball Z Movie 1. Gohan eats a special Nipple that is alcoholic. The gods' fruit, while it makes you immortal, also tended to make one rather tipsy, just like Gohan.

- While traveling on Snake Way, Goku is deceived by the Snake Princess. If she can't have his love, she'll eat him. This kind of thing is ALWAYS happening to Tripitaka during the journey. It's usually up to Goku to save his butt.
- While training in Kami's special time room, in the Dragon Ball anime, during one task Goku must wear a special crown that electrocutes him at certain times. In order to keep Sun Wukong obedient to Tripitaka, a golden crown was placed on his head. If Tripitaka simply uttered a special phrase, Sun Wukong would receive a terrifying shock!
- The Bansho Fan (Bamboo Fan) is a relic that, depending on how many swings you make with it, delivers severely varying degrees of rain. This is an object Goku tries to obtain to put out the fire on Frijoles Mountain in early Dragon Ball. Much later in Dragon Ball, Goku actually finds the Bansho Fan! This relic is from Hsi Yu Chi, and had the same uses and purpose.

- Ox King was a villain turned friend of Sun Wukong in Hsi Yu Chi. His name is really the Bull Demon King or Gyu Maou. In DB, Ox King is Chi chi's father.
- The Furnace of Eight Divinations is a furnace on the edge of the spirit world in Dragon Ball. Goku must travel to the bottom of this vat of white-hot fire to patch a leak in it. Sun Wukong is trapped in this furnace for an extended period of time and this causes his eyes to glow golden.

It is important to note that energy itself did not play a role in The Journey to the West. The Kamehameha, Genki Dama (or Spirit Bomb) and so on, are things made entirely up by Toriyama. The Journey to the West does have its fair share of fighting though! Most attacks are physical, not energy based, not energy.

HSI YU CHI AROUND THE WORLD

Dragon Ball certainly isn't the only popular modern adaptation of the original novel. This fable has transcended many cultures and mediums! Some examples are as follows:

- Monkey Magic- a semi-popular animated series that aired in syndication in America a few years ago. This managed to get its own video game for the Playstation. It loosely follows the original story, but the only major deviation kept intact is the monkey's appearance.
- Love Him- In one episode of this popular Drama/Comedy anime, Keitaro Utsunomiya and Naru Narusegawa, along with the other members of the must perform a scene from Hsi Yu Chi at a beach theater. The scene they portray is the battle against Ginkaku and Kinkaku, (also seen in Dragon Ball).
- Lost Empire- a television movie produced by NBC and aired in March 2001. It connects Hsi Yu Chi to modern times and argues over the importance of the story, and the influence it has had on people over time. Certainly can't argue with that! However, the story is really an "Americanization" of the series. Real names of characters are rarely used, and the story is...well...a bit lacking. Regardless it is interesting to see the story used in American culture.

- Monkey- a live-action Japanese TV show made in the 1970's. Although not popular, (or readily available) in America, it was quite popular in England. It takes some interesting spins on the tale like Dragon Ball. For example, a woman actually plays Tripitaka!

• Capcom VS Street Fighter- the character Sonson is based on Sun Wukong. Her attacks are all standard Sun Wukong moves. She even bestows peaches on you that refill your life when she is a support character. Interestingly enough, one of Sonson's super moves is transforming into a GIANT monkey and shooting energy out of her mouth. This seems like it is from Dragon Ball actually since this type of thing never happened in Hsi Yu Chi.

- Pocket Fighter- Characters from Hsi Yu Chi zoom by the top of the screen sometimes and drop support items in this video game.
- Gensomaden Saiyuki- A relatively new anime and manga series in Japan. Saiyuki is the Japanese name for Record of the Journey West. This series is really popular among girls today at the moment as the main characters are all gorgeous guys, but it's essentially actioning. It borrows characters from Hsi Yu Chi, but makes all the good-guys handsome humans regardless of whether they're a monkey or a pig. It also takes the series in a new direction. While the surroundings seem to be old, travel is done by car and Sha Monk is a chain-smoker.

So now that you know where Dragon Ball came from, we hope you can appreciate it even more! If you'd like to read the original novel it has been translated into English several times. A highly recommended version is:
